Registration, approval, waitlists and attending an event

Status: Current product help

AI Tinkerers events bring together people actively building with AI. Register for the exact event and follow its published admission instructions. For a screened event, submitting a registration or application is not an approval. Wait for verified attending/confirmed status before coming.

Understand your status

Registered/application received means your registration was captured; it can still need profile completion or organizer review. Attending/confirmed means you have an accepted place. Waitlisted means you do not currently have a confirmed place. A cancelled or declined registration is not a seat reservation.

Your talk proposal has a separate selection status. A submitted or rejected talk does not by itself establish whether you are admitted to attend. Read attendance and speaker-selection messages separately.

Open the exact event page while signed in with the account used to register. If its current status conflicts with an earlier email, ask the event organizer to verify the current RSVP and email history before travelling. Capacity or venue changes can affect previously confirmed guests; an old confirmation does not override a newer verified waitlist decision.

Missing emails and private joining details

A missing acknowledgment or acceptance email does not prove that registration failed. Receiving an attendee-board notification does not by itself prove admission either. Check the event page and account, then provide the event link and the missing message type in a support request. Staff need to distinguish saved RSVP state, queued mail, provider delivery and inbox receipt.

Private venue addresses or virtual join links require the applicable event access. A generic support question does not authorize sharing them. Registration does not promise that a capacity-limited webinar has an available connection, that a recording exists, or that it will be published on a schedule.

Guests, changes and cancellations

Each guest needs their own event registration and organizer approval unless the event explicitly publishes a different guest policy. Do not bring an unregistered friend, assume standing-room access or share a private join link to bypass registration.

For a transfer to another city/event, ask organizers to check both reservations, destination capacity and any screening requirement. Asking for a transfer or approval does not itself move, cancel or approve anything. Do not cancel a confirmed source reservation based only on an assumed destination place.

Use your event’s cancellation/manage-registration control if you cannot attend and confirm its completed state. Declining or deleting a personal calendar invitation does not automatically cancel the AI Tinkerers RSVP. See Calendar invitations and updates.

Finding the right help

Use the chapter’s public event page to register. For a pending application, capacity issue or decision, contact the event’s organizer through its published contact/support route. Include the exact event and account; never post a sign-in code or private joining link publicly. Organizers make admission decisions. A support explanation is not an approval, reserved place or completed account change.
