Edit your profile and correct outdated event text

Status: Current product help

1. Sign in to the account used for your event registrations and open your profile.
2. Expand Identity & work, update Title and Company, and select Save. You can also update your name in this section.
3. To edit your bio, expand Connecting & opportunities, edit Biography, and select Save Connecting Info.

Your profile versus a talk or generated introduction

The profile editor saves your profile. After saving, open the specific speaker introduction, event copy or slide you want to check and see which details it shows.

If a generated introduction names an old employer or role, first update your own profile with the steps above. If the introduction still shows the old details, share the event or talk link and the incorrect sentence with the event organizer or in your existing support case so the introduction can be checked separately.

To change the title or description of the demo itself, edit your existing submission for that event. See Submit and edit a demo.

Account email, sign-in and privacy

Account email changes and recovery use Member account help. A signed-in user can verify the new inbox; complete lockout requires staff identity review. Your optional organizer email alias is a separate feature described in Organizer email.

Use Profile Privacy to manage signed-out public visibility. Those controls do not hide your profile or Message Center activity from signed-in members. Never put a sign-in code or credential in a support post.
