Find an event, its board and the right organizer contact

Status: Current product help

Find the event and its tools

Start on the chapter's event list and open the exact event page, checking its city and date. Past events, upcoming events and private invitations can have different visibility. A search result or cached email does not establish that an event is upcoming or that you may access a private page.

Use the event's own registration, demo-submission, contact and management links. Do not substitute another city's next event when a submission link is missing. Existing proposals can be edited through the same event's submission page.

Message Center and event boards

What is Message Center for?

Message Center is where AI Tinkerers members talk with each other, take part in chapter and event discussions, and get help with the platform. Sign in to see the conversations available to your account.

- DMs are for direct messages. Groups shows group channels you can access, such as private groups and organizer channels.
- My Chapter and Topics help you find chapter and community discussions. Some events have their own boards for attendee questions, introductions and announcements.
- Search helps you find people and conversations you can access.
- Get help opens a support case. Support is where you return to your cases. You can also DM Ashley to ask what an AI Tinkerers feature does or how to use it.

Open an event board or folder chat

Use the event or folder's Message board or Folder Chat link. Access depends on the specific board.

Hackathons, dinners and other private event types already use dedicated boards. A Chapter Lead can enable an ordinary meetup's RSVP-gated board through Event Settings > Private event message board. Follow Event message boards for the full distinction and permissions.

Use the board's available notification preferences to control its messages, and email preferences for account-level choices. Board notification settings, newsletter preferences and on-site manager alert banners are different controls. An old design for manager-alert toggles is not evidence that a Notifications tab exists.

Contact an organizer or support

Use the event’s published contact route when enabled, or its authorized event discussion. For account, permission or platform issues, open a support case and include the exact event/page and what you see. The support button opens a conversation; it does not guarantee an instant automated resolution or a completed action.

Ask for a purpose-appropriate contact route, not a dump of organizer or attendee email addresses. Do not share private joining links, credentials or account verification codes in a board post. If you are already the responsible organizer, provide your role and event so support can investigate your actual scope instead of sending you back to an unidentified local organizer.